PENNYWORTH. n. f. [penny and worth.]
 1. As much as is bought for a penny.
 2. Any purchase; any thing bought or sold for money.
 As for corn it is nothing natural, save only for barley and oats, and some places for rye; and therefore the larger pennyworths may be allowed to them.
Spenser on Ireland.
 Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,
 And purchase friends.
Shakefp.'s Henry VI.
 You know I say nothing to him, for he hath neither Latin, French nor Italian, and you may come into court, and swear that I have a poor pennyworth of the English.
Shakefp.
 Lucian affirms, that the souls of usurers after their death are translated into the bodies of asses, and there remain certain days for poor men to take their pennyworths out of their bones and sides by cudgel and spur.
Peacocks.
 Though in purchases of church lands men have usually the cheapest pennyworths, yet they have not always the best bargains.
South's Sermons.
 3. Something advantageously bought; a purchase got for less than it is worth.
 For fame he pray'd, but let the event declare
 He had no mighty pennyworth of his pray'r.
Dryden.
 4. A small quantity.
 My friendship I distribute in pennyworths to those about me and who displease me least.
Swift.

PEN

PENSILE. adj. [pensilis, Latin.]
 1. Hanging; suspended.
 There are two trepidations; the one manifest and local, as of the bell when it is pensile; the other, secret of the minute parts.
 This ethereal space,
 Yielding to earth and sea the middle place,
 Anxious I ask you, how the pensile ball
 Should never strive to rise, nor never fear to fall.
Prior.
 2. Supported above the ground.
 The marble brought, erects the spacious dome,
 Or forms the pillars long-extended rows,
 On which the planted grove and pensile garden grows.
Prior.

 And secret passions labour'd in her breast.
Pope.
 2. It is generally and properly used of persons; but Prior has applied it to things.
 We at the sad approach of death shall know
 The truth, which from these pensive numbers flows,
 That we pursue false joy, and suffer real woe.
Prior.
PENSIVELY. adv. [from pensive.] With melancholy; sorrow-fully; with gloomy seriousness.
 So fair a lady did I spy,
 On herbs and flowers she walked pensively
 Mild, but yet love she proudly did forsake.
Spenser.
PENSIVENESS. n. f. [from pensive.] Melancholy; sorrowfulness; gloomy seriousness.
 Concerning the blessings of God, whether they tend unto this life or the life to come, there is great cause why we should delight more in giving thanks than in making requests for them, inasmuch as the one hath pensiveness and fear, the other always joy annexed.
Hooker, b. v. f. 43.
 Would'st thou unlock the door
 To cold despair and gnawing pensiveness.
Herbert.
PENT. part. pass. of pen. Shut up.

PENTECOST. n. f. [πενήκστη; pentecoste, Fr.] A feast among the Jews.
Pentecost signifies the fiftieth, because this feast was celebrated the fiftieth day after the sixteenth of Nisan, which was the second day of the feast of the passover: the Hebrews call it the feast of weeks, because it was kept seven weeks after the passover: they then offered the first fruits of the wheat harvest, which then was completed: it was instituted to oblige the Israelites to repair to the temple, there to acknowledge the Lord's dominion, and also to render thanks to God for the law he had given them from mount Sinai, on the fiftieth day after their coming out of Egypt.
Calmet.
 'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio, Come pentecost as quickly as it will
 Some five and twenty years.

 Shortness of night, and penury of shade.
Prior.
PEONY. n. f. [paonia, Latin.]
 The peony hath a flower composed of several leaves, which are placed orbicularly, and expand in form of a rose, out of whose empalement rises the pointal, which afterwards becomes a fruit, in which several little horns bent downwards are gathered, as it were, into a little head covered with down opening lengthways, containing many globular seeds.
Miller.
 A physician had often tried the peony root unseasonably gathered without success; but having gathered it when the decreasing moon passes under Aries and tied the slit root about the necks of his patients, he had freed more than one from epileptical fits.
Boyle.
PEOPLE. n. f. [peuple, Fr. populus, Lat.]
 1. A nation; these who compose a community.
